Secura Key Continues to Offer Product Training Program

CHATSWORTH, CALIFORNIA - Secura Key, of Chatsworth, California is pleased to announce the continuation of its Product Training Program with monthly scheduled webinars. Each month various webinars are available at no cost to anyone in the security industry or users of access control products.

Secura Key offers a Product Overview webinar, as well as a session on its SK-NET™ Software and its RK65K Standalone Product. These courses explain how to install and operate Secura Key's popular standalone access control systems and readers.

While Secura Key has offered factory training for many years, customers have found it increasingly difficult to send their installation and sales staff to California, considering the cost of lodging, airfare, and missed work time.

By using modern web-based training tools, such as Citrix Go-To-Webinar, Secura Key offers its customers live interactive training at their own facilities, or any place with an Internet connection. Other courses will be added in the future. Secura Key is also able to offer one-on-one training sessions for individuals or small groups by special request.

Participants can use the microphone and speakers connected to their PC's or they can use an optional telephone call-in number.

Secura Key's Technical Training Manager, Jeff Hamilton, conducts the live Webinars. Jeff, a 20-year Secura Key veteran, is intimately familiar with the product line, and he is now primarily focused on product training, while continuing to do technical support part time.

Those who are interested in participating in one of our scheduled public Webinars should visit the Secura Key website to register for the training. Just click on Support/Training.

Secura Key products are available through major distributors of security, access control, locking hardware and gate control equipment.
